

Alison Phinney is a Professor in the School of Nursing and Co-Director of the Centre for Research on Personhood in Dementia at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. As a researcher she is driven by curiosity to better understand the experiences of people who live with dementia, and as a nurse, she is driven by the desire to create change so our communities will be better places for them to live. Alison is the co-lead for the Building Capacity Project, working in partnership with community leaders and people with lived experience to create more opportunities for inclusion and meaningful community participation by people with dementia.
